Robert M. Giannetti, former owner of an antiquarian bookshop, lives in Lewiston, NY. He holds a Ph.D. in Renaissance English literature from Duquesne University. At times an Army officer, college teacher, garbage man, foundation executive and businessman in several regions of the country, he settled in Western New York, where he now pursues his writing and collaborative work with artists and musicians. Publications include: The Frontier: Poetry and Prose (2017), Drawn by the Creek (2003, 2011) and Winter Vision (2011), which was translated into Polish by Dariusz Lebioda and published in Warsaw in a bilingual edition. Wizja w Zimie/Winter Vision was awarded the Best Book of Poetry prize at the 34th International November of Poetry Festival in Poznan in 2011. The Poetry Collection of the University at Buffalo published a limited edition chapbook of his poems in 2014 to celebrate National Poetry Month. Website: www.RobertMGiannetti.com.
